John Harrison between 1971 and 1984, set in and around the fictional city of the same name. In the first novel in the series, the city of Viriconium exists in a future Earth littered with the technological detritus of millennia (partly inspired by Jack Vance 's Dying Earth series, Mervyn Peake 's Gormenghast series [1] and the poems of ...

Viriconium - Wikipedia John Harrison marshals an arsenal of arcane vocabulary to describe the fetid desuetude of the world of his mythical city of Viriconium. In a handful of stories written over the span of more than a decade, starting in 1971, he traces the fractured, half-remembered rise and fall of the eponymous imagined future city, founded many millennia after the demise of our own civilization.

Viriconium by M. John Harrison M. John Harrison is the award-winning author of eight previous novels and four collections of short stories. His fifth novel, Viriconium, was shortlisted for the Guardian Fiction Prize and his sixth, Climbers, won the Boardman Tasker Award. Light was recently awarded the James Tiptree Jr. Award and shortlisted for the 2002 Arthur C. Clarke Award.

Viriconium Series by M. John Harrison - Goodreads And so we come to the end of M. John Harrison ' s trilogy of novels set in the far, far future of our world. For In Viriconium (1982) Harrison drops almost all elements of heroic fantasy in presenting the story of the artist Ashlyme. Ashlyme ' s effort to rescue another artist, the reclusive Audsley King, from a plague outbreak is set against the antics of two manic deities.

M. John Harrison - Wikipedia I want to write a bit here about one of the odder works of an inherently odd subgenre: M. John Harrison ' s Viriconium sequence. There are four Viriconium books, three novels and a collection of linked short stories: The Pastel City, published in 1971; A Storm of Wings, from 1980; In Viriconium, from 1982; and 1985 ' s Viriconium Nights. One can technically read the books in any order, as few plot strands directly connect them.
